

The Mobile Revolution Has Left the Frontline Behind

77%

of consumers have used their smartphone in stores to shop.*

Customers have many questions in-aisle.

of them will check inventory availability on their smartphones.*

Why Not Just Ask an Associate?

The Frontline team typically relies on walkie-talkies and a limited distribution of handhelds constraining their ability to access information and assist customers quickly and knowledgeably.

Only 14% are connected*

When associates aren't connected, they can't help answer customer questions... and that leads to a poor customer experience.

----- | Associates leave the customer waiting while they walk away to get help.

---- | Store associates often guess the answer.

----- | Associates drag the customer all around a store as they look for the answer.
